Nils Landgren & The Swedish Radio Choir

Marvellous and moving

This is about the darker sides of love, but nevertheless Sandström makes it sound bright, as usual. During this 50-minute-long meditation Landgren's red-gleaming trombone often becomes a more sorrowful contemplative prolongation of the words. His singular vocal part, in turn, appears as a touching expression of mankind's voice and failings in relation to the ethereal choral sonorities in Sandström's marvellous and moving work. Dagens Nyheter 16.3.

Thrilling Turriago concerto

The composer transported the audience on a journey of enchanting Latino rhythms – the soloist shone and conversed with his instrument. Turriago's Trumpet Concerto is a major new orchestral work...The deafening applause was well earned as the concerto in all its richness swept into this world. Aamulehti 7.4.

This elegant, taut concerto abounds in beautiful detail, motifs that carry it along in an interesting way and some unexpected moments. The performance by Flores, Vásquez and the Tampere Philharmonic was both airtight and rich, full of energy. Kulttuuritoimitus.fi 6.4

Great beauty in The Promise

By depicting moods in a way that is recognizable for everyone, Gothe solves the communication challenge with elegance. This is most obvious in all the beautiful moments of the work, especially in the choral sections... Gothe has a fantastic command of the orchestration. It is deeply fascinating to follow how he sets up nuances of sonorities – to show the orchestra when it is most colourful, but not least to carry the drama... The libretto is poetic and allows scope for the music to come to a stop and be dreamy. And thus Gothe can write something as classical as arias. Musikmagasinet 22.3.

Rickard Söderberg & Jonas Valfridsson

Valfridsson's awesome premiere

Jonas Valfridsson's four movements capture in a very elegant way the mood of each season – a sort of lingering melancholy in the autumn movement, bright, budding hope in the spring movement, etc. It is music that is intricate without being for a moment inaccessible, and it is filled with strong emotions. Rickard Söderberg has the whole gamut of expression in his throat and in his presence on stage. This premiere is awesome. Jönköpingsposten 27.5.

Impressive Aho double concerto

Aho's fantastic command of orchestration and his ability to write clear, beautiful solo material were once again demonstrated. Contrasting with the soloists' delicate touch were the frantic frolics of the brass and a vast battery of percussions. Crowning it all were the ethereal flickers of the flutes and the hushed, tinkling bells. Kaleva 26.4.

Spectacular and utterly original

Whittall has recently succeeded in creating an aesthetic territory all of his own that, in its effortless stylistic synthesis, is utterly original. ...The orchestration, extremely effective and at times spectacular, suggests Ravel meets Richard Strauss, and the result is an extremely refined landscape. The organ part makes exhaustive use of the full potential of the Helsinki Music Centre organ, complete with quarter-tone steps and lighting changes of register. Hufvudstadsbladet 23.5.

Christian Reif, Tobias Broström & Björn Warwas

Stimulating and intensive Broström

The first movement's shrill trumpet, rapid rhythms and ample figurations make it swing in all colours... The second movement begins with a whirl. A rock pulse drives it on, lifts the trumpet solo and a refreshing dance melody with lovely lines. The last movement shimmers with iridescent, atmospheric sonorities... This was a bewildering, zestful and stimulating experience, full of presence and intensity, and a power of attraction that makes me want to hear it again, right away... Or why not a whole evening devoted to Tobias Broström's music. That would have been a real pleasure. Gefle Dagblad 13.4.

Wennäkoski CD warmly recommended

Flounce is short, brilliant and somewhat tongue-in-cheek Scherzo, full of drive and instrumental imagination... a splendid display of catching, and at times subtle, orchestral textures. ...As far as I am concerned, Wennäkoski is brilliantly successful. One can but hope that other harpists will find her Harp Concerto (Sigla) 🎵 well worth the effort. It is a splendid work by any count... Here is a composer with imagination and a strong ability to move, captivate and impress.

In every sense brilliant

The Crash gig opened with the Irish premiere of Antti Auvinen's Boundary Bourrée for ensemble. This was an intense, tense work of sharp, dry textures. It was roughly divided into three, concise attacca movements and was in every sense brilliant. Journal of Music 1.5.
