HORIZONS

Composed at Blue Dragonfly Studio for which I am eternally grateful to my Mother, Edita and Kostas. This piece is dedicated to them.

“Horizons” is revolving around the principle of several parallel stories evolving simultaneously as if reflecting fragmented states of consciousness that are so typical in current times and also expressed in various artistic forms. Examples that inspired me the most were the movies “Cloud Atlas” and “The Hours” and a book by Italo Calvino “If on a winter’s night a traveler”.

Fragments of the multilayered narrative in “Horizons” emerge to the foreground one after the other without necessarily being obviously interrelated or having a consequential transition between them. They comprise a static layer, shown every time from a different perspective by nearing or furthering the musical object while retaining a stable harmonic point of reference or a dynamic layer featuring repetitive accelerating rhythms and frequent changes of elements. Throughout the piece, the listener undergoes a constant shift from one story to another, from one musical world to another, thus attempting to disintegrate the experience of a predictably logical sequence and to disrupt the linearity of time.

HORIZONS

Explanations:

Winds

- Breathy tone

- Overblown tone

- Multiphonics. Choose best sounding multiphonics preferably from the indicated note otherwise including the given note.

Brass

- In case of long sustained notes, use respiration ad libitum

Percussion

- Strike the very center of gong

- Strike on the side of gong below the nipple

- Strokes are alternated between the center and the side of the instrument

- Bowed gong. Use cello or contrabass bow

- “buzz” roll created by pressing the beaters into the snare drum and producing a sizzling sound

Strings

- Fast natural harmonics glissando up and down on the indicated string played near the bridge. It is executed as gently arising and subsiding waves of sound to create an ephemeral atmosphere.
